

Community-wide Homeschool Event Planning for Coming Year/s

Deb McPherson, a local long-time home educator, has been working in recent months to bring together people involved in leadership positions from all of our local homeschool organizations to further strengthen our community and our impact for the Kingdom of God.

An organization composed of local homeschool organizational leaders and other members of our home educating community is being formed. The organization is called Lynchburg Home School Leaders (LHSL). In addition to representation from each of our area's homeschool organizations, LHSL is also looking for members who may, or may not, currently be involved with a homeschool organization or in leadership positions, but would like to offer insights and participate on committees formed to bring about local community-wide events.

There are several community-wide events emerging for the coming year with the intention of establishment as annual events.

Committees are currently being formed for:

- Central Virginia Homeschool Graduation being held May 30, 2009
- Central Virginia Homeschool Science Fair being held February 28, 2009

Other community-wide events being planned are:

- Election Day activities for November 4, 2008
- Standardized testing utilizing the Stanford Achievement Test for Spring '09

Please watch for further individual announcements regarding each of these events.

The LHSL currently has membership representing over a dozen local organizations and additional individual members of our home education community who will be participating on various event committees.

If you would like further information regarding LHSL or becoming involved with any of the events listed above please contact Deb McPherson: dkmcp@verizon.net

PLEASE SHARE THIS EMAIL WITH OTHER LOCAL HOME EDUCATORS YOU KNOW...

Many thanks!
